The Greatest Criminal Trial on Record.

In the whole history of criminal jurisprudence there has never, probably, been anything equal to the gigantic trial which was concluded at Moscow, Russia, on the 21st of November, and in which were arraigned five hundred prisoners, upward of two hundred of whom were convicted and sentenced to severe penalties. Among the accused were persons of every station in life—gray-haired men and youth, men and women; among the latter some highly accomplished and distinguished in appearance. All of the prisoners were charged with one of the gravest offenses in the criminal code of Russia—that of counterfeiting. That code says: "The person that counterfeits the coin or currency of the Imperial Government shall suffer death." Notwithstanding this rigorous provision, Russia has been flooded for many years past with well executed counterfeiters of the Government treasury notes. The prompt execution of several of these counterfeiters in passing the spurious coin did not materially check the evil. Offers of the largest rewards did not lead to the detection of the guilty parties.

At length, in July last, a curious accident gave the government the long looked for clue, which led to the discovery of an association of criminals of both sexes, banded together for the purpose of circulating the spurious currency, and which extended from the black and frozen shores of the White sea to the Volga and the Black sea. In the course of the two following months, three thousand men and women were arraigned, but after a preliminary examination twenty-five hundred of them were discharged, and about five hundred were held for trial. Among the latter were six Frenchmen, of St. Petersburg, who had been caught printing the counterfeit notes and comparatively large number of women. The prisoners were all conveyed to Moscow, where they were confined in the vast vaults underneath the Kremlin Palace. Criminal law in Russia is barbarous at the best, and the male prisoners were herded together like so many hogs. They received the coarsest fare, and straw their only couch.

The women were treated but little better. On the 20th of October the trial was opened in the large hall of the Kremlin, which holds nearly five thousand persons. The proceedings were protracted for a month, and the prosecution succeeded in establishing the guilt of over one-third of the accused. Two hundred and three of them were found guilty; among them about fifty women. Sentence of death was passed upon the six French printers, and the other convicted parties were condemned to hard labor in the gold mines of the Ural mountains for life, or for ten years. The doomed men and women burst into piercing shrieks and howls, and well they might; for, in the case of the former, the sentence included barbarous flogging and branding on the forehead with red-hot irons; while the women, some of whom were of fine descent, shuddered at the idea of having to do the most menial work for ten or twenty years at the station-house, where the coarser of the male prisoners reside. In their despair some of the unfortunate threw themselves on the ground, and their piercing cries, mingled with the clanking of their chains, produced a truly horrible effect. The excitement and frenzy of the condemned grew from minute to minute more intense, and the Judges, in order to restore quietude, had to call in the soldiers, who, with their bayonets fixed to their rifles, stood on the left and right, and then dragged them back to the vaults of the Kremlin.

How Much will Keep a Horse.

A horse weighing from ten to twelve hundred pounds will eat about six tons of hay, or its equivalent, in a year. And we suppose the real point to get at is, whether one can keep his horse cheaper on some other product than hay. This is an exceedingly difficult question to answer—it depends so much on circumstances. We shall not attempt to answer it fully at this time, but will merely say that, in our opinion, three and a half tons of corn stalks and two and a half tons of corn would keep a horse a year in fully as good condition as six tons of good hay.

We may estimate, also, that it will take three and a half tons of oat straw and two and a half tons of oats to keep a horse a year. A bushel of oats weighs thirty pounds, so that it will take 150 bushels and three and a half tons of straw to keep a horse a year. It would take about two good acres of good land to produce this amount.

This story comes from Maine: A man in Portland married a widow. She had a fashion, which is too common among ladies who've buried a man, of giving him glowing accounts of the angelic virtues of the dear departed.

As the prohibition law is in force in Maine, he could not drown his sorrow in liquor, so he nursed his soul to take a terrible revenge. One night when his wife was sleeping soundly, perhaps dreaming of the "first" victim of her charms, he arose from his bed, took a ledge-hammer, and deliberately raising it to his shoulder, he marched to the grave-yard and smashed the tombstone of his dead rival in little bits. Now, when his wife says anything about the virtues of the dead man, he replies: "It may be all very true, but he can't make my tombstone; there's where I'm ahead."

In the name of oxygen, which is the great life principle of the animal body, let us beg you to give the sick person a full and constant supply of fresh air.

If you keep him well covered he can never take any fresh air. If the wind blows open his eyes and nose, he will die. If you keep him well covered he can never be a mischievous impression made there. Remember that although a well man may live on in a room with imperfect ventilation, a sick one must have the help of a pure tonic atmosphere. Remember that when typhoid fever attacks an army, and there is a deficiency of aerial accommodations, those who lie in an open shed or exposed to the dews and storms do much better than those who enjoy the average hospital facilities.—Dr. Day.

Among the curious female avocations we find recorded in the tables of the recent census, independently of women in the agricultural districts who assist in the field work, there are forty-five female stock-breeders, six female apprentices to barbers, twenty-four women dentists, two female hostlers, two female professional hunters and trappers, five she-slayers, five hundred and twenty-five she-physicians and surgeons, sixty-seven female clergymen, two women scavengers, seven female sextons, ten female "cannal men," one hundred and ninety-six women draymen, one female pilot, six female gunners, four she gas-stokers, thirty-three women gunsmiths, seven female ship-powder makers, and sixteen female shipwrights.

Mr. Frank Calvert, a well known English geologist, has discovered near the Duquelles some remains which convince him of the existence of man during the Miocene period.

He has met with a fragment of a bone, probably belonging either to the Dinotherium or a mastodon, on the convex side of which is engraved a representation of a horned quadruped, "with arched neck, loose-shaped chest, long body, straight forelegs, and broad feet." There are also traces of goat or eight other figures, which however, are nearly obliterated. In the same stratum he has also found a flint flake, and several bones broken as if for the extraction of marrow. He has no doubt as to the age of the geological stratum in which he found these remains.

IN A SPIRIT BABY.

The New York correspondent of the St. Louis Republican tells the following remarkably tough yarn in a late letter: There's a school marm down East who has a phantom scholar which perhaps you've all heard of. But a Southern lady was in this city recently who has a "spirit baby." Four months ago she lost a babe of five months. She is a delicate, fragile creature, and the loss of her child nearly killed her. Four days after the little creature's death, and just at dusk, she became aware of something pulling at her dress, and there was a little baby back upon her bosom. From that time to this the baby comes back to be nursed as the evening shadows fall. She can't see it, but feels its little hands paddling about, as a baby's will, and those around her can see her dress dragged, her collar pulled, and the indentations on her bosom made by the invisible fingers of the spirit baby. Her physician is staggered. There is no alteration in her physical condition, everything going on as if she was nourishing a living child. The lady is not a professed Spiritualist, is excessively refined and aristocratic, a true representative of the old Southern slave-holding aristocracy, and she shrinks from having the phenomenon made public, but every night cradles in her arms her intangible baby. She feels its unseen mouth warm against her and bends with bitter tears above the invisible little visitant. It is not a desirable possession and I advise her to wear it as soon as possible.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN is a remedy for the cure of scrofula, Scurvy, Taint, Rheumatism, White Swelling, Gout, Gravel, Consumption, Bronchitis, Nervous Debility and all diseases arising from an impure condition of the blood.

The merits of this preparation are so well known that a passing notice is but necessary to remind the readers of the necessity of always having a bottle of this medicine among their stock of family necessities.

Certificates can be procured from many leading Physicians, Ministers, and heads of families throughout the South, in which the highest terms are used to commend the necessity of always having a bottle of this medicine among their stock of family necessities.

Dr. E. Wilson Carr of Baltimore says he has used it in cases of Scrofula and other diseases with much satisfaction.

Dr. T. C. Fugh of Baltimore recommends it to all persons suffering with diseased blood, saying it is superior to any preparation he has ever used.

Rev. Dabney Hall of the Baltimore South says he has been so much benefited by its use that he cheerfully recommends it to all his friends and acquaintances.

Craven & Co., Druggists, at Gordonsville, Va., say it never has failed to give satisfaction.

Samuel G. McFadden, Murfreesboro, Tennessee, says it cured him of the scrofula which all else failed.

Rosadalis is not a secret cure; its ingredients are all published on every package. Show it to your Physician and he will tell you it is composed of the strongest alteratives that exist, and is an excellent blood purifier. Did our space admit we could give you testimonials from every State in the South, and from persons known to every man, woman and child, either personally or by reputation.

Rosadalis is sold by all Druggists.
